CREATORS, REACH AND COVERAGE

THE WEEKEND

Formula 1, brought to Abidjan.

Race Weekend took over Espace Superkart across two days and turned the Monaco Grand Prix into a destination: live projection on a giant screen, a karting circuit running alongside it, a supercar paddock, a VIP lounge above the track, and 300 guests a day drawn from the city's young professional and motorsport communities. It was the first premium Formula 1 activation staged in Côte d'Ivoire.

ON THE GROUND

What the weekend looked like.

THE ROOM

300 a day, twice over.

The guest list was built, not opened. Young professionals, motorsport people, brand partners and creators, in a venue that kept them moving between the track, the paddock and the lounge.

GUEST OF HONOUR

Omar Jahidi.

Formula 4 driver and Formula 3 test driver, winner of the Aramco F4 Abu Dhabi. Present across both days for demonstrations, exclusive content and direct exchanges with guests.

- Two full days on site
- Driver demonstrations and Q and A
- Exclusive content across both accounts
- Direct access for partners and guests

GUESTS & AMPLIFICATION

People who make it credible.

Race Weekend was anchored by figures who carry genuine authority in motorsport. Not just an audience, but a reason for that audience to take the event seriously.

Seven creators, one weekend.

Authority filled the room. Reach filled the feed. AToure brought in seven Ivorian creators, from national television faces to automotive and lifestyle voices. Between them they hold close to 3.9 million followers, an audience many times larger than any venue in Abidjan could seat.

DIGITAL PERFORMANCE

Built for the room. Made for the feed.

Two accounts were created for the event and run through the weekend: @race.weekend for the audience and @race.mediactiv for the media desk. Both started from nothing.

LEADING REELS, OF THE EIGHT VISIBLE

- 22,400 views · event flyer and line up
- 19,000 views · branded cap and merchandise

Figures read from the account and platform screens as at August 2026. Reel views cover the eight posts visible on the grid, not the full 26, so the true total is higher. The Scoop Afrique figure is likes, not views. Creator side reach is not included here because it has not been reported back by the individual accounts.

Who picked it up.

Race Weekend was covered by Ivorian and panaffrican media, by the broadcast partner, and by the country's events and lifestyle pages.

Scoop Afrique

Panaffrican digital news. Reported the weekend as a success across TikTok, Instagram and Facebook, with the TikTok cut passing 12,700 likes and framing the venue as Abidjan living to the rhythm of the Monaco Grand Prix.

Canal+ Côte d'Ivoire

Broadcast partner. Promoted Race Weekend to its own Facebook and Instagram audiences ahead of both days, carrying the venue, the dates and the booking line.

Baab

Ivorian culture and events guide. Listed Race Weekend at Gasóleo across the two days, crediting AToure Management as organiser.

Superkart CI

Venue partner. Ran the event through its own Instagram and Facebook channels to a standing motorsport audience in Abidjan.

Bons Plans Côte d'Ivoire

Ivorian listings and city guide. Carried the announcement to its TikTok following in the run up to the weekend.

Creator and community pages

Independent recaps from Abidjan creators and photographers, including World of Souley, Bictogo Abdel and Henri Toh Pixel, each posting their own cut of the weekend.

Compiled from a public search in August 2026. Print and broadcast pickups that did not publish online are not captured here.

ON TRACK

The circuit stayed open.

Karting ran alongside the projection across both days, with the Superkart circuit and the supercar paddock giving guests something to do between sessions and something to film while they did it.

IDENTITY & MERCHANDISE

A name you could wear.

Race Weekend was built as a property, not a party. Bespoke race suits, embroidered jackets, caps and a full merchandise line carried the identity out of the venue and into the feed.

PARTNERS

Who backed the weekend.

Race Weekend was delivered with a partner group spanning broadcast, hospitality, retail, energy and diplomatic representation.
